Was Lawyer, Author, Arts Patron, Penologist, Great Humanitarian

Sam A. Lewisohn, noted industrialist, who was one of America's foremost collectors of modern art, died of a heart attack, at Santa Barbara, Cal. He was 66 years old. His wife, Mrs. Margaret Seligman Lewisohn, was at his bedside when he was stricken at the Biltmore Hotel cottage which they had occupied for several months.

Mr. Lewisohn had suffered a serious heart attack last year in Guatemala, and last fall at his New York home, 115 East Seventy-third Street, experienced a slight recurrence of the ailment. He remained active in business and came to Santa Barbara for a rest at the insistence of physicians. His chief diversion was visits to the Santa Barbara Museum of Art, to which he had contributed several art pieces.

Financier, philanthropist, patron of music and art, penologist, author and humanitarian, Sam A. Lewisohn, son of a distinguished father, carved out many careers during an active life. When Adolph Lewisohn died in 1938, at the age of 89, his only son already had achieved national and international renown in diverse fields of endeavor, says the New York Times.

He had caused a new prison policy of this state to be inaugurated; as a member of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's National Advisory Council he helped frame the Social Security Act, and he had written several books that had won him recognition in the field of improving employer-employee relations.

In addition, he had plunged into philanthropic campaigns, written authoritatively and incisively on art while adding to the family's fame as a collector, continued his father's mining and banking interests and followed his father as a [illegible] of the concerts at the Lewisohn that when his father took him to the White House in 1908 to be a luncheon guest of President Theodore Roosevelt the President inquired of the youth whether he would pursue his father's work.

"Do you mean in the mining industry?" young Lewisohn asked.

"No," the President answered, "I mean philanthropy."

That conversation was said to have left a lasting impression on the youth, who thereafter dedicated his life in large part to the humanities.

Mr. Lewisohn was born in New York on March 21, 1884, the son of Adolph and Emma M. (Cahn) Lewisohn. One of five children, Mr. Lewisohn was born on West Fifty-fourth Street. He attended Columbia Grammar School and then Princeton, where he studied under Woodrow Wilson. He was graduated in 1904 and entered Columbia Law School, where he was a classmate of Franklin D. Roosevelt and editor of "The Columbia Law Review." Some years later he worked on prison reform under Mr. Roosevelt, then Governor of New York.

After receiving his law degree in 1907, Mr. Lewisohn worked in the law offices of Simpson, Thatcher and Bartlett under Dwight W. Morrow. Then, giving up law except as an incidental aid to his industry career, he joined his father's firm, Adolph Lewisohn and Sons, then a member of the New York Stock Exchange. He became president and a director of the Miami Copper Company, General Development Company, Kerr Lake Mining Company and the South American Gold and Platinum Company, and chairman of the board of the Tennessee Corporation. His interest extended to banking and real estate and he was a director for the City and Suburban Homes Company and of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of America.

deeply interested in improving employer-employee relationships, says the New York Herald Tribune. He

Einstein Award, Set Up By Strauss, Goes To Two Scientists

The first Albert Einstein Award for achievement in the natural sciences, reported as the highest award of its kind in the United States, has been won by Prof. Julian Schwinger, mathematical physicist, of Harvard University, and Prof. Kurt Goedel, mathematical logician, a colleague of Dr. Einstein, at the Institute of Advanced Study, Princeton, N. J.

The awards, made by a committee of distinguished scientists headed by Dr. Einstein, were announced by Lewis L. Strauss, president of the board of trustees of the Institute for Advanced Study, who served as a rear admiral in the Navy during World War II and later as one of the original members of the Atomic Energy Commission. Mr. Strauss established the award in memory of his parents, the late Lewis and Rosa Strauss of Richmond, Va.

Formal presentation of the award took place at Princeton on Dr. Einstein's seventy-second birthday, last week.

The winners will divide a $15,000 cash prize and will receive medals bearing the likeness of Dr. Einstein, designed by Gilroy Roberts, Philadelphia sculptor and engraver.

In addition to Dr. Einstein, who is honorary chairman, the committee making the award consist of Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, director of the Institute for Advanced Study; Dr. John von Neumann and Dr. Hermann Weyl, two of the world's outstanding mathematicians both members of the institute.

Professor Schwinger, who was 33 years old on February 12, is regarded among American theoretical physicists as the heir-apparent to the mantle of Dr. Einstein. During World War II, while serving at the radiation laboratory of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where war-time radar [illegible] he discovered new [illegible] waves.

This formed the basis for much theoretical and practical work with microwaves, which, according to the award committee, "had great civil and military significance."

His most recent work — rated by many as his greatest — has given science new understanding of the important problem of the interaction of light and matter and the properties of electrons and light, both basic to the understanding of the forces making the material universe tick.

Professor Schwinger's work is said to have provided physicists with "a powerful new mathematical compass to guide them through the dark jungles of the nuclei of atoms, promising to lead them to hitherto forbidden domains of knowledge concerning the innermost working of the material universe."

When he as still in his early twenties he was credited with having "contributed many important suggestions about the structure of atomic nuclei and about many decisive experimental studies of nuclear interactions."

Dr. Goedel's work in mathematical logic is regarded, according to the award committee, "as one of the greatest contributions to the science in recent times."

Born in Bruenn, Czechoslovakia, on April 28, 1906, and in the United States since 1938, Professor Goedel came to the attention of scientists toward the end of the 1920's, when a number of outstanding mathematicians were working on the problem of simplifying and understanding the foundations of logic.

Of him, Dr. Oswald Veblen of the institute, who is a noted mathematician said:

"Dr. Goedel's first great contribution was to realize that there are, in a properly codified mathematical system — such as, for example, ordinary arithmetic — propositions which can neither be [illegible]

Since his initial achievement, Dr. Veblen said, Dr. Goedel has gone on with a "very broad study of logic in all its aspects, and in particular has displayed great power in determining, so to speak, what can and what cannot be done."

"Perhaps the most notable of these achievements," Dr. Veblen added, "was the proof, which he made something over ten years ago, that two of the axioms which have been generally used by mathematicians, although frequently doubted by the more sophisticated — namely, the 'axiom of choice' and the 'Cantor continuum hypothesis' — are consistent with the other axioms of set theory if these axioms are also consistent."

Dr. Goedel also has delved "very deeply" into the history of logical and scientific ideas. He is regarded as a leading authority on Leibnis, and has shown that it was part of the great German philosopher-mathematician's program for science to work out a symbolic logic (based on pure mathematical concepts) of the sort that is only now being developed, 235 years after Leibnis's death.

Dr. Schwinger received his A. B. and Ph. D. degrees at Columbia University and has been Professor of Physics since 1947, one of the youngest to achieve the rank of professor at Harvard in its 300-year history.

Dr. Goedel received his Ph. D. at the University of Vienna in 1930 and taught there from 1933 to 1938.

Dr. Albert Einstein, neatly dressed in a gray suit, blue shirt and tie, broke his quiet, scholarly routine briefly, emerging from his small cream-colored frame house on Mercer Street at Princeton, N. J., to celebrate his seventy-second birthday by presenting the first Natural Science awards bearing his name.

Miss Helen Dukas, Dr. Einstein's personal secretary, reported he is in good health and forsook his habit of walking to the institute from his home, going by auto to the luncheon preceding the award ceremony. His attire was in sharp contrast to the informal clothes which he prefers while working at the institute.

Instead of the lamb chops, peas and roast potatoes served the guests, Dr. Einstein had two soft-baked potatoes and a baked apple.

He went to a room off the dining hall where he posed quietly with Drs. Goedel and Schwinger and Lewis L. Strauss, of the institute, as news photographers flashed picture after picture. But when the newsreel men wanted to record the presentation, he shook his head vigorously and said, "No, no, that's enough," and marched out of the room.

Claim For Nazi Crimes To Cover Only Stolen Property, Aid To Survivors

Israel has filed a claim for $1,500,000,000 of reparations from Germany for the Nazis' "gigantic slaughter and rapine" of European Jewry.

The claim was contained in notes delivered on March 12 in Washington, London and Paris and was handed at Tel Aviv to the Soviet Minister for transmission to Moscow. The four Governments were asked to consider the subject of over-all reparations, as well as individual restitution and indemnification, at any future meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers.

They were also asked for an early expression of their views on steps that might be taken to implement proposals for Germany's payment of reparations. Without going into details, Israel suggested that payment might be spread over a number of years and that partial payment might be made in form of goods, according to the New York Times.

The sum requested was approximately the value of exports from West Germany alone during 1950 and, noting that exports were likely to increase considerably in 1951, Israel declared that the reparations demands "would not be beyond the capacity of the German people."

Emphasizing that the Nazis' "vast and fearful" crimes could not be expiated by any measure of material reparation, Israel based her claim only on the amount of money she would spend on the absorption and rehabilitation of 500,000 survivors of European Jewry already in Israel or coming in the near future. The note quoted estimates of $6,000,000,000 as the value of Jewish property seized by the Nazis in Germany or in Nazi-occupied countries during World War II.

"The dead cannot be revived," Israel's note said. "Their torment cannot be undone. This much, however, can be demanded: that the German people be required to restore stolen Jewish property and to pay for the rehabilitation of those who have survived."

Western Germany is willing to meet all justified claims put forward on behalf of German Jews, whether they live there or abroad, Alfred Hartmann, Secretary of State in the Bonn Finance Ministry, said at Bonn.

He disclosed that the West German Federal Government and the 11 state governments were negotiating now as to which of the manifold state restitution laws valid in West Germany should be made the basis for a Federal restitution law.

W.J.C. Works To Protect Refugees In Latin America

Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, head of the World Jewish Congress delegation to the Economic and Social Council conference in Santiago de Chile, won support at Montevideo, Uruguay, for a program to ensure that the proposed Inter-American security regulations will not endanger the position of thousands of recent Jewish immigrants and stateless persons in Latin America. Dr. Perlzweig's mission to Montevideo, where he conferred with officials of the Uruguayan Foreign Office, was part of preparations by the World Jewish Congress for the forthcoming Western Hemisphere meeting in Washington, D.C., on the "security of the Americas against aggression." This session, which opens on March 26, is scheduled to adopt recommendations for a standard system of internal security to be [illegible] by each of the American re-

Induct First Reform Temple in Latin America

Temple Beth Israel, the first Latin-American congregation to affiliate with the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, parent body of Liberal Judaism in America, was formally inducted into the Union in a special ceremony which took place at Havana, Cuba. Dr. Samuel S. Hollender, of Chicago, Ill., chairman of the Union executive board, presented the charter of membership to Harry E. Price, president of the congregation, and hailed the event as another step forward in the ever-growing hemispheric unity of the Americas.

He said: "This event truly symbolizes the fundamental and basic unity of our people; the common heritage and ideals which have bound them in indestructible kinship through global dispersal and persecution. I am indeed hopeful and optimistic that this charter of membership which I am presenting tonight, will be a harbinger of great progress of Liberal Judaism throughout all of Latin-America and that this union which we are consummating here will enrich all Judaism, enabling us more resolutely to go forward in the sacred work of God."

Temple Beth Israel, the United Hebrew Congregation, of Havana, became the 427th Reform congregation to affiliate with the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. Three other Union affiliates outside the United States are located in Canada. Temple Beth Israel, the only Reform Jewish temple in Cuba, has Rabbi Milton Weisberg, as its leader. He is a graduate of the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, class of 1947, and a veteran of more than two years service in the Chaplaincy of the United States Army.

In accepting the Union charter of membership, Mr. Price expressed gratification that his congregation had joined the mainstream of Liberal Jewish life and pledged that Temple Beth Israel would play a vital role in the family of Reform synagogues. "Our countries have enjoyed a good neighbor policy for many years", he said, "our temples have also enjoyed a good neighbor policy. However, by establishing organic unity with our sister congregations to the north we are strengthening the solidarity of our countries and our people."

Jews Of Italy Still Need J.D.C. Help

Needy and distressed Jews in Italy, despite the assistance they have received from private United States welfare organizations since the war, will continue to need outside aid during 1951.

Murray Gitlin of Colchester, Conn., director for Italy of the American Joint Distribution Committee, said at Rome that the organization's program of "rescuing, rehabilitating and emigrating Jewish survivors of World War II, plus the rapid recovery of Italian Jewish communities themselves, has resulted in real social progress in Italy during the past five years." Nevertheless, the task of providing relief assistance, medical treatment, emigration aid, educational and vocational help, and religious guidance to Jewish refugees in Italy is far from finished, he added.

One of the major problems facing the committee in Italy during 1951 will be the care, maintenance and treatment of some 500 "hard core" cases — aged, ill and handicapped persons — who are committed to an institutional future. The committee operates a sanatorium and a rehabilitation center in Italy on their behalf, while other "hard core" cases are supported in private hospitals and other medical installations. The plan is to transfer all of these incapacitated persons to Israel eventually. About 40 per cent of the committee's current $22,360,000 budget will be dedicated to their care.

Funds for the welfare activities of the Committee are provided through contributions to the United Jewish Appeal of the United States. During 1950, the Committee aided in the emigration of more than 1,700 persons to the United States, Canada, Australia and South America, and provided assistance to some 27,000 persons travelling through Italy to Israel from Poland, Hungary, North Africa and other places. The agency is processing 1,300 more Jewish emigrants who are planning to go to the United States and other havens overseas.

One of the Committee's major achievements in Italy since the end of the war has been the reconstruction of Jewish communities. Jewish organizations in Rome, Milan, Venice and other cities are now caring for their own relief cases, doing their own welfare work, assisting needy persons with vocational and occupational guidance and engaging in their own fund-raising for local needs. In Rome, the Joint Distribution Committee was instrumental in creating a modern welfare agency and a vocational guidance program. Social workers were trained at the Committee's school in Versailles, France.

A prominent feature of the committee's program in Italy to help people to help themselves is a loan fund, based in the industrial city of Milan. Organized to assist Jewish merchants, small manufacturers, artisans, and professional men and women to get back on their feet, the fund was established with $70,000 advanced by the American agency.

Some 300 individual loans totaling more than $110,000 have been made. One of the most successful enterprises that have thus come into being is a shawl-producers' cooperative that gives employment to scores of Jewish men and women. More than two thirds of the money lent since the loan fund was established two years ago has been repaid already.

In its care of displaced persons in Italy, the Joint Distribution Committee cooperates with the International Refugee Organization, an agency of the United Nations.

MARRIAGES

QUITT-FELDBRILL

The marriage of Ruth Pauline, daughter of Mrs. Betty Feldbrill, 1632a Bathurst Street, to Gerald Quitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Quitt, of Hamilton, took place on Tuesday, March 6, at half-past five o'clock, at Beth Sholom Synagogue. Rabbi David Monson officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Silver. She wore a gown of white net over satin. Cut with V-neckline, it had a beaded, stand-up collar, long sleeves, and pleated net skirt, extending into a short train. Her matching bonnet was trimmed with seed-pearl beads, and held a full-length tulle illusion veil. She carried a white Bible, adorned with three white orchids. Miss Kale Feldbrill was maid of honour in a green taffeta and white net gown, with matching hat, trimmed with daisies. She carried a cascade of daisies and roses. Laya Silver was flower girl in a pink and white organdy dress, and carried a nosegay of roses and daisies. Murray Nadler was best man. The ushers were; Jack Miller, Leo Quitt, Marvin Friendly, and Laurie Quitt. The bride's mother wore a grey lace gown; and the groom's mother was in a pink chiffon gown; both having corsages of mauve orchids. For the trip to New York, and Miami, Florida, the bride travelled in a pink suit, with navy-blue accessories, and corsage of white orchids. On their return, the couple will reside in Hamilton.

Don'ts for hospital visitors: Don't visit a patient if you have a cold; don't discuss depressing subjects of cases similar to his that ended fatally; don't discuss his condition with other visitors in whispers that he can just hear; don't stay too long.

CANADIAN SPORTS PARADE

SEPTEMBER 1950 marked the lowest ebb in the fortunes of General Manager Joe Ziegler of the Toronto Baseball Club. After 15 years in baseball Ziegler hit bottom when his ball team finished a dismal seventh in the league with RED the prevalent colour on the ledger. The one bright spot was the divorce the club obtained from the Philadelphia Phillies. Joe Ziegler considered jumping off the stadium roof but faced the Toronto Ball Club Directors instead. "You can nurse the situation along," he told them, "and hope that fate will be kind to you or you can go all out to rebuild the team. Rebuilding will entail expenditures of at least $100,000—IF—players are available and can be secured." The directors looked at Ziegler and then at the ledger. Without hesitation they shrugged off their 1950 losses and instructed their General Manager to "shoot the works". Since then Joe Ziegler has worked, traded, intimidated and finally assembled a fighting ball club.

Top Manager:

After four years of accepting managers named by major league clubs, the Leafs went out and bagged a man of their own choice—Joe Becker. Becker had been named Manager of the Year in his only two seasons in the International League. He led Jersey City to a pair of first-division berths despite losing such ball players as Monte Irvin, Hank Thompson and Elbie Fletcher.

As a catcher for 14 years in organized baseball, Becker played in only 40 games as a major leaguer, with Cleveland in 1936-37. Managing the Leafs will be Joe Becker's first season outside the New York Giants chain after four years with the descendants of John McGraw.

Pitchers:

Undoubtedly the return of pitcher Phil Marchildon to Maple Leaf livery will cause the greatest interest as far as Ontario fans are concerned. Returning to the Leafs for the first time since he signed his original professional contract (with Dan Howley) back in 1939, Marchildon will attempt once more to combat the "pitching jinx" which has haunted him since returning from a German prison camp in 1945.

The pitcher from Penetanguishene, Ontario, has followed the fortunes of his baseball career through the ranks of the Philadelphia Athletics of the American League, Buffalo of the International and now in 1951 he will return to Maple Leaf Stadium, where a host of fans and friendly surroundings should do more than anything else to restore his brilliant fast-ball genius.

The 1951 Leafs are also betting strongly on the pitching talents of John Hetki (Cincinnati 1950), Elmer Singleton (Washington 1950) and of course on Don Robertson, last year's standout pitcher for Toronto.

Sell-Out Year?

According to Gord Walker, Business Manager of the Leafs, 1951 should be a banner year for the Club. Gord believes that the strong advance sale of tickets for opening day April 25 reflects the general confidence of the fans in Joe Ziegler's choice of players. Of a total of 2,819 upper boxes there are none left; only a few field boxes and loge boxes remain for sale; in the reserved grandstand (total capacity 3,413) 20 single seats remain unsold, and even general admissions have a heavy advance sale.

All in all, 1951 promises to be THE year for the Toronto ball club. The fact the Leafs now own most of their players, that their affiliation with the St. Louis Browns is not binding, combined with the return of Bob Rhawn, Fred Collins, Ralph Lapointe and Vince Plumbo and the acquisition of Frank Colman (Seattle 1950) and Lewis Morton (Dallas 1950), should bring the vision of a pennant much closer to Maple Leaf Stadium and Toronto.

MARRIAGES

ZILBER-EHRENREICH

The marriage of Selma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ehrenreich, 87 St. Cuthbert Street, to Solomon Zilber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Zilber, 3950 St. Urbain Street, took place at Reverend M. Master's, on February 25, at half-past seven o'clock. Reverend Master officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her floor-length gown was of white beaded satin, cut with a sweetheart neckline; long tight sleeves, coming to points at the wrists; a tight-fitted bodice; and a straight skirt ending in a long train. Her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion was fastened to a satin headdress, and she carried white orchids and streamers. Miss Mary Ehrenreich, sister of the bride, as maid of honour, wore a floor-length gown of pink net, trimmed with gold; and a matching stole. She had a pink headdress, trimmed with gold and pink net; and carried pink orchids, yellow daffodils, and mauve tulips. Sheila Zilber, niece of the groom, was flower girl. She wore a yellow organdy floor-length dress, a matching yellow bow of satin in her hair, and a bouquet of pink orchids. Ben. Zilber, brother of the groom, was best man. "Because" was sung and an orchestra played. For the reception, spring flowers adorned the tables. Mrs. Ehrenreich, mother of the bride, wore a brown crepe dress, trimmed with gold beads at the neckline; long sleeves, trimmed with gold beads at the edge of the sleeves; a brown straw hat, trimmed with green ribbon; and a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Lerner, mother of the groom, wore a blue crepe gown, with a sash at the side, and a blue straw hat; also a corsage of yellow roses. Miss Dora Ehrenreich, sister of the bride, wore a yellow net floor-length gown, with a corsage of pink orchids pinned at the waistline. The bride and groom spent their honeymoon in Ste. Agathe, the former travelling in a navy-blue gabardine suit, with matching navy-blue hat, with a grey feather. They will reside in Montreal. Mr. and Mrs. Moe Berliner, uncle and aunt of the bride, of Ottawa, Ont., were wedding guests.

WOMAN WAS FOUNDER OF HOSPITAL

Mrs. Dorothy Silberman, widow of Alfred M. Silberman, former president of the Consolidated Cigar Corporation, died in New York in Mount Sinai Hospital at the age of 59. She resided at the Sherry-Netherland Hotel. Daughter of the late Julius Lichtenstein, founder of the cigar company, she had been active in civic and charitable organizations in New York and in Hartford, Conn., where she formerly had lived. Mrs. Silberman was a founder of Mount Sinai Hospital in Hartford and of the Hebrew Women's Home for Children in that city.

Last October, she laid the cornerstone of a memorial chapel she donated to Temple Beth Israel in Hartford. Mrs. Silberman is survived by two sons, Samuel J. Silberman, president of Consolidated Cigar, and Marvin Silberman, both of Searsdale, N. Y.

CLASS IN COOKERY

PRIZE NUT CAKE

one and one-half cups flour — one egg yolk four tablespoons butter — pinch salt four tablespoons sour cream

Mix flour, butter, egg yolk, and salt together well; add sour cream, and make into soft dough. Roll out, fold, and let stand for about one hour. Divide in half, and roll out thinly, placing half on greased baking sheet.

Filling

five egg yolks — one and one-half cups six tablespoons sugar — ground walnuts six beaten egg whites

Mix egg yolks and sugar; add walnuts, and fold in egg whites; stir well, and pour onto dough on the baking sheet; use the remaining dough on top. Pierce the top, to allow for air, and bake in 450-degree oven from twenty minutes to one-half hour. Slice to serve.

Mrs. W. Frischman,
163 Ava Road, Toronto

CHEESE PIE

one and one-half cups crushed graham crackers five-eighths cup sugar
two tablespoons melted butter
two tablespoons flour
one-quarter tablespoon salt
one pound cream cheese
one teaspoon vanilla
four eggs
one cup sweet cream

Combine crumbs with two tablespoons of sugar, and the melted butter. Zwieback crumbs may be used instead of graham crackers. Line bottom of greased spring-form pan with crumb mixture. Mix rest of sugar, one-half cup, with flour, salt, cheese. Add vanilla; four egg yolks; and beat well. Add cream. Fold in stiffly-beaten egg-whites. Pour over crumb mixture, and bake in a 325-or 350-degree oven for one hour; turn off heat, and leave pie in oven for one more hour.

EINSTEIN AWARD

To Dr. Goedel, Dr. Einstein smiled as he presented the award, and said, "To you, my friend. You don't need it." He then laughed heartily, shaking his huge shock of white tousled hair. To Dr. Schwinger he said, "Here, you deserve it."

The $15,000 award, this time split between the two winners, will be presented every three years from a fund established by Mr. Strauss, president of the board of trustees of the institute, in memory of his parents, the late Lewis and Rosa Strauss, and in Dr. Einstein's honor.

Dr. Schwinger received the prize, according to Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, director of the institute, for formulating a neat mathematical connection between light and electrons, describing exactly how they affect each other, says the New York Herald Tribune.

Dr. Goedel, Dr. John von Neumann, of the institute, reported, made his contribution to mathematical logic. He showed that it will always be impossible to set up mathematical systems that are free of contradiction.

Dr. Einstein himself won the Nobel Prize in 1905 with a theory of electron emission in photoelectric cells. Besides this achievement, he also formulated a theory of special and general relativity and made numerous contributions to every field of physics.

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

Convert, Apostate, Proselyte

"Thus said God the Lord, He that created the heavens, and stretched them forth, He that spread forth the earth and that which cometh out of it. . . . I the Lord have called thee in righteousness, . . . And kept thee, and set thee for a covenant of the people, for the light of the nations; . . . I am the Lord, that is my name: And My glory will I not give to another, neither My praise to graven images." (Isaiah 42:5-9)

The subject, "Convert — Apostate — Proselyte" is chosen because hardly a week passes when one who is of the non-Jewish faith does not seek guidance as to the manner by which to join the fellowship of Israel. For the most part these come to the Rabbi because they contemplate marriage with a member of the Jewish faith. Also among the newcomers from European shores to Canada, there are a few who, because of factors such as mental depression resulting from suffering under Nazi terror, seek escape from Jewish identification and choose to kneel at the baptismal font. How paradoxical that should happen among European refugees! They seem not to have learned the lesson from Hitler. The truth of the matter is that thousands literally of Jewish Christians were forced by Hitler to return to Judaism.

What do we mean by conversion? Usually this term refers to a member of the Jewish faith who embraced Christianity or any other religion but is not hostile to Jews and Judaism. This conversion may be due to practical reasons. In many European lands formal affiliation to what was more or less a state-church was a pre-requisite to many a professional career. Without conversion the doors were tightly closed to Jews who wished for important positions in the universities, the state, and in general professional or industrial realm. Many of the converts thus sought the light of comfort and safety which Christianity has been able to provide. Surely, the leaders of the Christian Church recognize those converts who come into Christianity for mere safety and security but not out of spiritual yearning. The Church hopes that the children and grandchildren of these will somehow become devout Christians.

The Christian church has a mission of conversion. Judaism also preaches a mission in the ideal sense by force of moral and ethical conduct. But Christianity, Orthodox Christianity, considers it an obligation to carry the mission to heathens, Jews, and all non-Christians, for it holds to the belief that the Christian faith alone can bring salvation to these peoples. One wonders, indeed, at the paradox that so many Christians who are so anxious to get Jews a place in heaven do everything to deny the Jew a rightful place on earth!

Despite the doctrine of the Church which teaches that baptism must be voluntary, during the middle ages Jews were forced to the baptismal font. Constant pressure was exerted, economic and legal, to make the Jew leave the faith of his fathers. The Jew in those dark ages had to choose either persecution, exile and death, or baptism. Hence, we have today people in Portugal and Spain, descendants of those Marranos who openly practiced Christianity but secretly professed Judaism.

However, in all fairness it must be stated that some Jews came into Christianity out of conviction, especially in days when Christianity possessed no power. These were attracted to the faith by its mysticism.

One may recall the name of Heinrich Heine, the Jew who was baptised and became a Protestant in Germany as a preliminary to his doctor of laws degree at the University of Gottingen. Heine felt himself, though baptised, was never converted and considered it a disgrace and stain upon his honour that he had to become converted to obtain office. Thus, in 1826 he wrote "I am hated alike by Jew and Christian. I regret very deeply I had myself baptized. I do not say I have been the better ever since. On the contrary, I know nothing but misfortune."

Among converts to Christianity who rather served well the cause of truth in defense of the Jew were men like Professor David Chwolson (1911) of Semitic scholarship fame, and Benjamin Disraeli, the Earl of Beaconsfield. Another famous convert was Bishop Scheraschewski, of Shanghai, who translated the Bible into Mandarin Chinese and is known as the translator of the two-finger Bible.

II

By apostasy, we refer to one of Israel's household who embraces another faith for selfish reasons and opposes Judaism and attacks Judaism. These we name "Meshumodim". The term "Meshumed" was thus a name of stigma. Within Jewry such have been looked upon as betrayers and traitors. The Jewish people have suffered much from these apostates. One need only recall the behaviour of Nicholas Donin who brought about such misery by distorting the truth of Judaism in the thirteenth century. Because of his lies in 1242, twenty-four carloads of Talmudic literature were destroyed in the public square of Paris.

What shall we say of that despicable person, Johann Pfefferkorn, whose early training as a butcher was his sole claim to scholarship, who employed the Church leaders to believe that the Jewish Talmud was filled with libels on Christianity? Alas, the Dominicans of Cologne supported this apostate and in 1509 Pfefferkorn obtained permission from Emperor Maximilian to confiscate the Talmud. Fortunately, Johann Reuchlin, the great Christian humanist, came to the rescue. By Reuchlin's scholarship and his plea, the Talmud was saved.

Montevideo after discussing the problem with U.N. leaders and diplomats of various American states at the Santiago meeting, warned of the possibility that, unless adequate safeguards were provided, such a security system might be perverted by anti-Semitic elements into an instrument of discrimination and even persecution. Many Jews who had sought refuge in Latin America from Nazi totalitarianism now found themselves in a precarious legal position because they have not yet become naturalized, Dr. Perlzweig pointed out. Others, even if naturalized, were looked upon with suspicion in some areas because they were born in countries which are now behind the Iron Curtain.

It is therefore important, he told the Uruguayan officials, that the security program adopted at the Washington conference contain protection for stateless persons and provide safeguards for loyal and law-abiding residents who happen to have been born in Eastern Europe. It was understood that Dr. Perlzweig received assurances that the Government of Uruguay would support appropriate measures to protect both racial and religious minorities and democratic political groups whose views might not coincide with those of the government in power.

Dr. Perlzweig's Latin American tour included a visit to Lima, Peru, where he met with governmental and Jewish leaders and received an invitation to attend the 400th anniversary observations of San Marcos University, oldest institution of higher learning in the Western Hemisphere, representing the WJC.

WAS LAWYER

wrote extensively on the subject, publishing "The New Leadership in Industry," in 1926, a book so advanced for its time that it was also published in French, German and Japanese, and "Human Leadership in Industry," in 1945. He called it "a challenge, a warning and a guide to executive leaders to assume the full responsibility which is theirs for improved human relations in industry."

He also helped to organize the American Management Association, which he described as "an extension university for management groups," and was its first president. His interest in labor relations was recognized when he was appointed American employer delegate to the International Labor Conference in 1935.

When Mr. Lewisohn's father died he left him $2,000,000 outright and a similar amount in trust, a one-eighth residue of his estate, 6,000 shares of common stock in Adolph Lewisohn & Sons, and the home, art works and furnishings at 881 Fifth Avenue.

Mr. Lewisohn became treasurer of the Stadium concerts and shared honorary chairmanship with the Mayor. The world's greatest music played and sung by many of the world's greatest artists at the Stadium, Mr. Lewisohn said, had popularized the concerts with the great mass of people.

In a letter written to the editor of the New York Times last week, Mr. Lewisohn commended the permanent exhibition of the paintings of Albert Ryder, opened at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, as "an outstanding event in the art world".

"Up to the present time," he wrote, "the isolation of these Ryders has been comparable to a situation where Melville's 'Moby Dick' would be left unpublished on an editor's desk. Like Melville in literature, Ryder in paint was our greatest romantic — probably our greatest painter."

With his father, Mr. Lewisohn was one of those instrumental in instigating the reorganization of Federal prisons and, a staunch supporter of progressive penology, had long been identified with legislative committees, boards of directors and other official bodies concerned with improving correctional institutions. He was a member of the New York State Commission of Correction for sixteen years and at the time of his death was a member of the board of directors of the Federal Prison Industries, Inc. He pioneered in organizing prison industries in New York State and elsewhere and making it possible for prisoners to be paid wages.

In 1930 he was appointed by Gov. Roosevelt as chairman of a committee to organize the New York State parole system. Its report was the basis for the present system. He was then appointed chairman of a committee to investigate prison administration and construction in the state. Its recommendations saved the state $6,000,000 in prison construction and its reports on prison education, discipline, probation, classification and vocational opportunities for inmates have been the basis for continuing reforms, according to the New York Herald Tribune.

Mr. Lewisohn was a director of the Youth Counsel Bureau, Inc., a vital crime prevention agency; an honorary trustee of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies in New York, and a trustee of the Jewish Child Care Association.

He was a trustee of the New York Foundation and of the Academy of Political Science. A recognized connoisseur and collector of paintings, he served on the Municipal Art Commission in 1948. His book, "Painters and Personality," published in 1937 and republished in 1948, was considered a testament to his taste and discernment.

He was a trustee of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, vice-president and a trustee of the Museum of Modern Art, a trustee and member of the governing committee of the Brooklyn Museum, a member of the Municipal Art Commission, a trustee of the Academy of Political Science, a trustee of the Jewish Child Care Association and a life honorary trustee of the New York Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies.

He was also a member of the executive committee of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee and a director of the Youth Counsel Bureau of the District Attorney's office, sponsored by the Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of New York, the Jewish Board of Guardians and the Community Service Society.

Mr. Lewisohn married Margaret Valentine Seligman in 1918. She is the daughter of Mrs. Isaac N. Seligman and the late Mr. Seligman. They had four daughters, Dr. Marjorie Greta Lewisohn, Mrs. Sidney Simon, Mrs. Julian C. Eisenstein of Madison, Wis., and Miss Virginia Lewisohn. Mr. Lewisohn's sister, Mrs. Arthur Lehman, is a sister-in-law of United States Senator Herbert H. Lehman.

Mr. Lewisohn was a member of the Stock and Curb Exchanges, the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, the State Bar Association and the City, Players, Princeton, Recess, Harmonie, Century Country and Mining Clubs.

At the funeral of Mr. Lewisohn, at Temple Emanu-El, in New York, honorary pallbearers were: George W. Alger, Ernest Angell, Arthur J. Cohen, Joseph F. Cullman Jr., Rene d'Harnoncourt, Herbert Feis, John G. Greenburgh, Peter Grimm, Charles S. Guggenheimer, David M. Heyman, William B. Boyce, Hans V. Kaltenborn, Henry Morgenthau Jr.; Sam H. Morris. Others were: Thomas I. Parkinson, Roland L. Redmond, Nelson Rockefeller, Lindsay Rogers, Howard J. Sachs, Eustace Seligman, Maurice Sterne, Arthur Hays Sulzberger, Francis H. Taylor, E. H. Westlake, Leo Wolman, Walter E. Meyer, Frank Lewisohn, and Dr. Richard Lewisohn.
